Care Sheets

Scientific Name: Eublepharis macularius

Native to: Pakistan, Northern India, Iran, Iraq and Afghanistan

Average Length: 7-9 inches including tail

Life Span: 15-18 years

General Information

Our Leopard Geckos are captive bred in our facility. They are one of the most popular geckos because of the wide variety of morphs and they are very easy to care for. Unlike some other geckos, Leopard Geckos are able to open and close their eyes. Leopard Geckos are very active during dusk and dawn hours. Adults become very docile and are easy to breed. Leopard Geckos do shed their skin and their tails are fragile so be careful when you hold them.

General Care

Enclosure: A 10 gallon aquarium with a vented lid is recommended for one Leopard Gecko. If you are housing two or more together a 20 gallon aquarium is needed. House males in separate aquariums. Adult males will fight when housed together.

Substrate: Use sand, reptile carpet, and wood chips

Habitat: Decorate aquarium with non-toxic plants, branches, logs, and cork. Include small hiding places for your gecko. Also include dampened sphagnum moss in the hiding spot to help in shedding and keep them hydrated.

Temperature: Temperature during the day should be kept around 80-82° F with a warm area 85-90° F. Night temperature can be as low as 70° F. Humidity level should be kept low besides in the hiding spot. Keep the hiding spot around 80° F. We recommend an under tank heater for controlling the cage temperature as these nocturnal geckos do not typically bask under a heat lamp.

Lighting: Leopard Geckos need 10-12 hours of light per day. They are nocturnal, so they do not require UVB lighting.

Food and Water: Provide clean, fresh, filtered chlorine free water in a shallow bowl that cannot be tipped over. Feed your Leopard Gecko every two to three days. Juvenile Leopard Geckos will eat small crickets and mealworms daily. The juveniles will eat medium sized crickets, mealworms and wax worms. Adults will eat large crickets, wax worms, mealworms, and pinkie mice. Dust crickets lightly with vitamins and powdered calcium supplement every other feeding. Juvenile leopard geckos should be lightly misted twice weekly to help them shed their skin.
